Abstract: The current belongs to the code in essence. However, it is the product of codification legislation at the exploration and initial stage. In the new era, it is necessary to create an 'upgraded version' of the criminal code in accordance with the higher requirements of codification. Based on the concept of codification, the task of comprehensively amending the criminal law includes integrating the punishment content of the counterterrorism law, the counterespionage law, the supervision law and other laws; organically connecting with the and other specific laws; absorbing the reasonable content of the existing special criminal laws, criminal law amendments, legislative interpretations and judicial interpretations; creatively setting important general rules and regulations; improving the clarity of the design of the constitutive elements of a crime, and adding misdemeanors on the premise of modest legal interests protection; promoting the scientific structure of punishment, and increase the provisions of punishment-related systems, etc. In the era of codification, the comprehensive amendment of the criminal law needs great improvement of the reality, integration and systematicness of the law. The comprehensive amendment of the criminal code does not exclude the promulgation of special criminal laws under special circumstances, but it is not appropriate to enact subsidiary criminal laws. At present, it is necessary to organize forces as soon as possible to conduct in-depth research and fully demonstrate it, and formulate a criminal code that is more in line with the requirements of the times and has a more reasonable internal structure in the long term on the basis of the current criminal law in accordance with the concepts and requirements of the codification, which provides more adequate legal system support for realizing the modernization of state capacity and system for governance.
